

Col. Vasile MARINEANU is the Head of the Romanian National Military Center for Psychology and Behavioral Health, the President of the Romanian Society for Military Psychology, member in the Standing Committee on Crisis, Disaster and Trauma Psychology of European Federation of Psychologists' Associations, member in the Board of the Romanian College of Psychologists, and Adjunct Professor at the University of Bucharest. He is a graduate of the Romanian Air Force Academy, the University of Bucharest, and the European Centre for Strategic Security Studies "George C. Marshall", Germany. As field psychologist, Dr. Marineanu has conducted intensive international activities in mental health operational focused activities during five NATO deployments in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Kosovo or Afghanistan. Consequently, he planned, coordinated, and executed, together with Civil Affairs Teams, and local community agents, psychological support for war victims, refugees and displaced persons, offering mainly psychological first aid and crisis intervention. Col. Marineanu has been actively involved in professional regulation of the field of crisis intervention and trauma support within NATO Science and Technology Organization and the Romanian Ministry of National Defense, especially in the development of several national standard operating procedures (e.g., resilience training and operational stress control, critical incidents management, crisis and disaster intervention, operational trauma and stress support, SERE psychology training and reintegration etc.).